Can you imagine what it would be like if you could invite the New Testament Evangelists Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John over for a night of storytelling? Just imagine them all sitting around you as they start at the beginning and tell you what they have heard and seen of the life of Jesus Christ. There would be many times they would want to all speak at the same time, yet there would be other occasions where only John would speak or maybe even Matthew or Luke. Mark would probably want to start, but the others would soon join in, each with his own style and with his own words. You would be on the edge of your seat as they spoke with passion and conviction about the life and ministry of Jesus. We have had them separate for so long, now it is time for them to come together and tell us the whole story in just one book. This is A Gospel for the Reader, all four Gospels harmonized into one. Nothing is left out, everything is here. The Gospels were written to be read, and now they can be read together without having to flip from one Gospel to the other, without long theological explanations or verse numbers to distract from their stories. They each have a story to tell, and now we have them telling their story together.
